MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1861. A Spagestion.-It has been suggest to us, and we think the suggestion worthy least of consideration, that, inasmuch as the course of simultaneous and coextensive action into which the raisers of regiments among have fallen serves in a large measure to defe the common end, it would be well for the get tlemen who are engaged in raising regime in a particular district to come to an under standing with each other according to which but one regiment at a time shall be raised in the district. It is urged by those who favor this suggestion that if it were asked upon the whole number of r giments to be raised in a gaven district could be filled with much greate rapidity and case than by the present course which thus far has begotten mutual hinderance instead of mu'ual help. Besides, the service in this event would not be kept waiting until all or nearly all the regiments are tilled, as it would be if the reg ments should all be filled at the same time. The order of precedence if the suggestion should be adopted, might b determined by the respective dates of the way. rents held by the raisers of regime mis, or in ary other mode upon which they could acroe. The dullest times of peace could hardly exceed the quietness and i action of affairs in Washing-The dullest times of peace could hardly exceed the quieness and I action of affairs in Washington. The flash of existement which has pervaded the eity for a few weeks has passed away with the frolish story that the rebels were momentarily expecting to advance on the Federal fices. On the other hand, it likewise seems settled that Gen. McGlellan contemplace an forward movement for some time. Even the picket firing which has raged with such violence of late, has nearly crased, and the life of the advanced skirmishers has become void of excitament. It would not be proper from to give you the number of troops that have been pouting in during the mison ight nights of she past ten day, though I may any that the grand columns of the Union arms are hously swelling into the most an jestic proportions.
